

Individual Diverse Global Distinct

Ana Curbelo is an award winning illustrator and artist. She has worked as an illustrator internationally with clients such as Microsoft, BBC, and Vice, creating characters with a very distinct personal style. Her most notable works are her illustrations for The Tampon Book, which helped change German law, won several awards, and attracted worldwide press interest. It won a White Pencil in Impact at D&AD and a Grand Prix at Cannes Lions. Curbelo grew up in the Canary Islands, studied graphic communication at Loughborough University, and now works from her studio in Stoke Newington, London. Her works approach is minimalistic with underlying humour. She enjoys exploring attitudes and expectations regarding the female condition. When she's not working on commissions, she likes to paint large oil paintings, experiment with woodwork, and design and cast silver jewellery.
